Bulletin

National Reoffending figures Young Offenders 2008 Cohort

- 8.9% fall in the number of reoffences committed by children and young people from 2005 – 2008
- 24.8% fall in the frequency of reoffending comparing 2006 and 2008
- Reduction in the number of serious offences committed by young people from 0.90 per 100 offenders in 2005, to 0.84 in 2008
- YOTs and Probation results show progress against the Government target to reduce juvenile and adult offending by 10% between 2005 and 2011.
- “This is good news for the youth justice system year on year, the reoffending figures continue to fall. The public can feel more confident that real progress has been made in reducing youth crime, this means fewer offences and fewer victims”.
- Based on National sample of young offenders in 2007 tracked for 12 months. Data from Police National Computer
